BLEASE AND GRACE
BURY THE HATCHET

Governor and Charleston's Mayor Clasp Hands and Smoke Pipe of Peace at Banquet.
Charleston, Feb. 12.—Burial of the hatchet and official smoking of the pipe of peace between Governor Cole L. Blease and Mayor John P. Grace marked the dinner served at the Commercial Club shortly after 6 o'clock last evening, where the four hundred members of the legislature and heads of state departments who had been the guests of the city of Charleston throughout the entire day were gathered, together with some two hundred interested Charleston residents. All the available seats were taken even members of the various committees sacrificing their seats for the benefit of the visitors, and scores stood around the walls of the big banquet hall and crushed the hallway outside the door, eager to catch some of the speaking, if nothing else. In common with the preceding performances of the day everything went off well at the dinner last night, and it was noticed that nearly as many ladies were present at the table as men, the wives of Aldermen and city officials joining with the visiting ladies in increasing the feminine percentage. Loud cheers greeted the mayor, who presided over the dinner, when he rose and rapped for silence. Governor Blease occupied the seat next to the mayor, and appeared to be in a state of agitation during the remarks of the former.

Mayor Extends Welcome.
"On behalf of the city of Charleston, I welcome you," began Mayor Grace. "We are honored tonight by the presence of the chief executive and representatives of the two law-making branches. Some people cannot understand in the light of public events of the recent and more or less remote past, how the mayor can find it in his heart to invite the governor of South Carolina and to welcome him into our midst." Loud and continued applause broke in here. The mayor rapped for order strenuously and continued: "The answer is that we both represent constituted authority. The people of Charleston made me mayor—the people of South Carolina made his excellency governor. Who are we that we should question the will of the people, from whom we derive all our power? It matters not if the courtesy extends not beyond official lines. I need not answer that question as to whether the welcome extends beyond those lines." Mayor Grace stated that, in spite of all their differences, he believed, barring certain fundamental differences, their general ideas were tending in the same direction. "He may differ with me," says Mayor Grace, referring to the governor, "but I reserve the right to interpret his conduct even differently from that way in which he interprets mine. We both represent the people. I wish for the spirit of peace for the people of South Carolina."

An Interruption.
"He said a great many things I didn't like," declared the mayor. ("Bawl him out! bawl him out!" shouted some one in the audience.) The cry was taken up and an angry murmur rose over the assemblage, but again Mayor Grace pounded sharply for order, which he secured after considerable effort. "But this is neither the place nor the time to revive those differences. The great people of Charleston welcome the governor! How could we other than welcome the gentlemen of the general assembly," continued the Mayor, adding, even though they do not in some respects understand the constitution. "There is no constitutional reason," he added, "why the Assembly should not grant the people of Charleston what they want." For twenty years, stated the general assembly members have been laboring under a misapprehension. "You have it in your power to make us a law-abiding people," he continued, adding that when the members returned to Columbia they would find on their desks a little book which he begged them to accept, and which would show an honest way out of the difficulty. "You can make us thoroughly obedient to your mandates," said Mayor Grace, "but if you persist in the mistakes of twenty years the people of Charleston will be compelled for a time to disobey laws which were not intended for a cosmopolitan community. Governor and Mayor Clasp Hands. To show that there was no malice as he said, the governor next offered his hand to Mayor Grace. Mayor Grace stood up and grasped the extended hand, and they gripped heartily for a moment, while the crowd cheered. The governor took his seat. Don't You Believe It. Some say that chronic constipation cannot be cured. Don't you believe it. Chamberlain's Tablets have cured others—why not you? Give them a trial. They cost only a quarter. For sale by all dealers.

GIVE THAT PUNY CHILD THIS GUARANTEED REMEDY

If your child is under-weight, listless, ailing, liable to get sick easily, it needs a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that we can so strongly endorse as Rexall's Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish to the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall's Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefited by it, and the digestion improved. On the other hand, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object to giving their children. It does its good work by taking hold of the weakness and builds the body up to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease. If Rexall's Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the stunted, puny muscles, and make the little one lively, strong, well, and full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to lose a cent. We think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. STOMACH TROUBLE
FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advice from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it. I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it. I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me." Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest.
